Enjoy Art in Fukuoka

As the blazing heat and humidity of the summer begins to fade, the quiet and cool beauty of autumn enters. The cool and comfortable autumn is the perfect season for taking your time and appreciating works of art and working on your creations. This is the one of the reason of autumn is described as “芸術の秋” (“Geijyutsu no Aki”, meaning “Autumn is the season for the arts”). Aiming to become a city of art full of color, Fukuoka City is promoting “Fukuoka Art Next,” which aims to increase opportunities to come into contact with art in daily life and to support the growth of artists.

Nurseries and Kindergartens

In Japan, many children who have not yet entered elementary school go to nursery (「保育園」 Hoikuen) or kindergarten (「幼稚園」 Youchien). What is the difference between nursery and kindergarten? How do you apply for it? Here, we will introduce the characteristics of kindergartens and nurseries, and the general enrollment process.

	Kindergartens	Nurseries
Purpose	Early childhood education before entering elementary school	Childcare for parents who are working
Age	From 3 years old to before entering elementary school	From 3-month-old to before entering elementary school
Childcare time period	9:00 – around 14:00 (Standard childcare hours per day: 4 hours)	7:30 – around 18:00 (Standard childcare hours per day: 11 hours)
Lunch	Optional	Provided
Summer/winter holidays	Yes	No
Teachers' license type	Kindergarten teacher license	Nursery teacher qualification
Jurisdiction	Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology	Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare

In addition to kindergartens and nurseries, there are facilities that provide childcare services, including "Center for early childhood education and care" (「認定こども園」 Nintei Kodomoen) that combine the functions of kindergartens and nursery schools, and "Municipal level Childcare Services" (「地域型保育園」 Chiikigata Hoikuen) that take care of children aged 0 to 2 in small groups. There are also "company-led nurseries" operated by a company with a subsidy for operating expenses from the government.

“Fukuoka and me”

In this section, we will introduce a foreign national living in Fukuoka.

Interview with Phillip Jacobson from Australia

Q1. Could you please tell us what brought you to Fukuoka and or Japan?

Initially it was mere curiosity I suppose that brought me to Japan. I had the opportunity to homestay with a Japanese family in Fukuoka for 10 days when I was 15 which was an eye-opening experience. As I was studying Japanese at school, it was insightful to see how the language and culture converged.

My interest was also in creating a business in Japan or with a connection to Japan. I enjoy speaking Japanese. I find the Japanese language, being a very high context language to be very intriguing. Honorific language (Keigo), Humble language (Kenjyogo), and Polite language (Teineigo) are concepts that don't exist in the same way in my own native tongue. I find that Japanese culture mirrors the language and that is also reflected in people's characters. Australian English is rather informal and casual, which is in turn reflected by the happy-go-lucky nature of Australian people.

Q2. What kind of activities (work, etc.) are you currently doing in Fukuoka?

I run a English Education company. We focus on practical English (jissen) and conduct immersion programs in various places throughout Japan. We also run an English Gakudou (after school program in English), teaching English through activities, experiences, rather than reading, and/or one-way teaching. Our summer camp also attracts a number of American participants residing on the navy base in Sasebo.

Q3. How have you overcome any difficulties or obstacles in your activities or life?

I try my best to understand the culture, even at times when I feel it is arbitrary. Japanese culture values the perception of how things are done as well as the finished product. As such I try to understand the impact my behavior has on others who are around me. There are unseen and unspoken rules in Japan. It takes a while to gain knowledge of these things. It comes from trial and error. I think that the best advice would be to take responsibility for your life in Japan. Blaming Japan or a negative attitude towards your environment is self-defeating.

Q4. What are your thoughts on your current life in Fukuoka?

I feel like the work I do is fulfilling and I am able to make a contribution to society. Fukuoka itself has a good balance of country life and city life. It is great that mountainous areas are close by as well as the city and the seaside.

Q5. Could you please tell our readers if you have any more messages?

Language is the key to opening doors. So, try to understand the Japanese language. Japanese people can appear difficult to decipher at times, and it can be difficult to know where you stand at times. As I mentioned, it is a high-context culture,

The Pearls of Modern Indian Painting Nandalal Bose and Upendra Maharathi at Fukuoka Asian Art Museum

Nandalal Bose (1883-1966), one of the pioneers of modern Indian art, and Upendra Maharathi (1908-1981), who emerged in the next generation, are known as painters who were greatly influenced by the Bengali school of writers, including Abanindranath Tagore (1871-1951) in terms of thought and expression. At the beginning of the 20th century, the Bengali school emphasized traditional expressions and techniques over Western painting and interacted with leading figures of the Japanese art world, such as Tenshin Okakura and Taikan Yokoyama while sharing a sense of crisis that the art of our country was at risk of being lost in the wave of rapid westernization. Bose is a representative of this, and Maharathi, who stayed in Japan for two years in the 1950s, became devoted to Buddhist themes.

This exhibition introduces a part of their painting career from the collection of the National Museum of Modern Art, New Delhi, along with related works from the collection of the Fukuoka Asian Art Museum. Please enjoy the pearls of modern Indian painting born from fateful encounters with artists from the Bengali school and painters from the Japanese art world.
